

MESHEL LAURIE

Meshel Laurie is a radio and television broadcaster, writer and corporate speaker of over 20 years' experience.

Meshel is currently a regular panellist on Channel Ten's The Project, and pops up quite a bit on TV, with numerous appearances throughout her career. Credits include Hughesy, We Have A Problem, host of ABC's Stand Up! co-hosting Ten's This Week Live and regular guest appearances on shows such as Rove Live, The Glass House, Can of Worms, Spicks and Specks, Good News Week, The Circle and Adam Hills: In Gordon Street Tonight.

Meshel is an established radio personality. From breakfast with Ash, Kip and Luttsy at Nova 106.9 Brisbane (which went on to become one of the highest rating shows in the state), to the national Drive show with Tim and Marty in 2011, back to breakfast with Tommy Little at Nova 100 in Melbourne in 2015 and most recently co-hosting the KIIS 101.1 breakfast show in Melbourne with Matt Tilley.

In 2013 Meshel released her first book titled The Fence-Painting Fortnight of Destiny. A memoir and an insider's perspective on the 1990s comedy scene, the workings of an inner-city brothel, what it's like to be 'the girl on Rove' and how fence-painting can help save a life. She followed it up in February 2017 with Buddhism For Breakups, which follows Meshel's personal story and how Buddhism can be a roadmap for navigating the fear, loneliness and grief of a broken heart. Meshel's third book and second in the 'Buddhism For...' series, Buddhism For The Unbelievably Busy, was released in November 2017 and explores how to juggle the demands of modern life, using her own experiences and drawing on her long and varied career. Honest, hilarious and heartfelt, it's a tool to help you stay sane in the modern workplace, handle difficult relationships and how to achieve greater balance in your life.

Meshel regularly writes columns and articles for The Age and Sydney Morning Herald. She presents the Nitty Gritty Committee podcast, where she chats with former prison inmates, the homeless, transgender activists, homicide cops, famous people and non-famous (but amazing) people. Meshel also presents the Australian True Crime podcast with Emily Webb – together with expert interviews with writers, victims, investigators and perpetrators, they probe the underbelly of our towns and suburbs and uncover the darkness at the heart of Australian life.

Buddhism is Meshel's key to contentment, she puts her heart and soul into being a better Buddhist every day. She embraces her spiritualism by giving back to communities around the world. Meshel is proudly a board member of His Holiness the 14th Dalai Lama in Australia, and for Reconciliation Australia.
