MIKE NAYNA

Co-founder of the production company Checkpoint Media, Mike Nayna has over 8 years of industry experience spanning across digital and television production, news and current affairs, factual entertainment, comedy, viral marketing and comedic stage production.

Since taking up stand-up comedy in 2012 Mike has appeared on Nova, Triple M, ABC's RAW Comedy national final, SBS' Live at Bella Union, Channel Seven's Sunrise program, series two of ABC's Twentysomething and amassed more than 10 million hits across a range of YouTube projects including the Screen Australia-funded cult series Dayne's World.

In 2013 he was accepted into the Atlantic Theatre Company's summer intensive program in New York City and went on to co-write, direct and star in a sellout run of his first comedic play "It's Me, Mandela".

Mike has also started a string of successful comedy rooms in Melbourne and earned himself a reputation for pushing boundaries with his 'outside of the box' approach to comedic writing.
